It seemed to me that Tom was really upset at me this morning every time Anna got distracted during breakfast. Tom told me I was responsible for making sure she ate breakfast and didn't get distracted.

Currently, she is eating, but is also taking relatively long breaks to talk to Tom and watch him type on his computer. I'm think that if I mentioned anything to Anna about staying focused on eating, he will get upset at me.

Earlier: when we were discussing taxes, Anna would run into the room, really excited about things she had found that we had forgotten, I had been talking each time, answering Tom's questions and discussing things about the tax returns draft. I asked Anna gently not to interrupt since mom and dad were working. Tom stopped me and told Anna he wasn't doing anything that couldn't be interrupted. He seemed, to me, to be upset with me for saying something to Anna and told me so. I tried to tell Anna that her interruptions were difficult for me; Tom cut in said something like "Yiwei, I can't..." in what seemed to me to be an angry mood, and walked away. He came back after 10 min or so, he still seemed upset.
